The Book of Margery Kempe: Fourteen Hundred & Thirty-Six Margery Kempe

Margery Kempe was a very expressive 15th century Christian mystic. She is well noted in the literary world as the first person to author an autobiography in English. Margery's book, The Book of Margery Kempe, depicts her many interactions and struggles from her first steps into a devout life to her travels around Europe and more. Though she was illiterate in both Latin and vernacular, like most women of her time, Margery was able to compile this autobiography through the assistance of a handful of scribes or "readers" as Carolyn Dinshaw puts it. More times than not, when asked, a scribe would refuse to write her book for her because of the risks attached to the act.
