The information contained in this book has both anthropological and sociological implications. As we look at American society longitudinally, it is significant to note the changes that have occurred over the past half-century. This is not to indicate that things are even near where they should be in an enlightened culture. But the movement is in the right direction. Many of the social dynamics of the 40's, 50's and 60's are all but alien to the newer generations. But we are not out of the woods by a long shot, and what happened before is an indelible part of our history that students need to know to ensure that history does not repeat itself.
