“I can’t believe it’s you.” Jayden muttered low for only her to hear and grated his teeth because he was angry, he didn't wanted to see her at all in his life.

“Neither can I.” She said staring at him with her green eyes.

“But don’t you think that I am happy like you, to meet my ex.” Jayden said and saw her frown. She turned to him abruptly and glared. That abrupt movement caused her blouse to tighten around her breasts a bit with the friction between her and the seat, stretching the top button to snap open and air seemed to whoosh out of his lungs at the sight.

“Oh please, I am anything but happy to see you.” His gaze riveted to her eyes when she spoke. Her green eyes held fire and he wanted them to burn more but with passion and pleasure. He checked himself quickly because he didn't know where that thought had come from.

Jayden and Angelina's father wanted them to work together and they reluctantly agreed because their fathers didn't know about their past. They were dating 6 years back and separated badly after a short period of dating.

They met after 6 years in a meeting room and none of them was going to back out from the opportunity of being a CEO, so they agreed to work as Co-CEO s.

They are determined to ignore each other but would the growing chemistry between them allow that?
