Course of Russian is not a phrasebook and not a wordlist. It is actually a language COURSE. It teaches you to use Russian language in actual life situations. The lessons will take you into 60 different situations, that you will most probably take part in, when you start dealing with Russians or when you arrive to Russia. “You know, it’s like I’ve just returned from Russia!” said one student after having completed my course. Then he added: “And I want to go back there.” Course of Russian will not overwhelm you with never-ending grammar tables. You definitely know, Russian grammar is rather complex, and many Russian teachers demand that their students just memorize grammar rules and tables. But take an average 6-year old Russian kid – he hasn’t ever seen any grammar table, but he speaks rather correct Russian! That’s what my students achieve – they just speak Russian. They use it. Without grammar tables. Third, let’s face the truth: a good audio course usually has at least 10 hours of audio recordings and really teaches you a language (and I mean listening, speaking, reading and writing). Such a course might cost more than a hundred dollars. This is more or less the “common sense”. In my course, you get 60 downloadable audio lessons FREE. You only pay for transcripts and for reading, writing AND TYPING lessons. I haven’t seen a course yet, which teaches you typing in Russian. Although I bet that last week you typed much more than you hand-wrote. All these cost hardly a half of any other good audio course (check it yourself). Starting with lesson 29, there are sections that will teach you reading, typing and writing Russian. Every new lesson is built on the vocabulary and grammar of the previous lesson.
